Sangam Talks Interview

Eminent author and researcher Rinkoo Wadhra interviewed Rajiv Malhotra and Vijaya Viswanathan on their book Snakes in the Ganga during this edition of Sangam Talks. In this engaging discussion a lot of issues are discussed, including Americanization of Marxism, cancel culture, Critical Race Theory. Rajiv mentions how teachers are being trained in the US to propagate such views with the help of a large army of sepoys in universities, government, and HR departments in Indian corporates. Vijaya talks about attacks on family structures and attempt to dismantle them because they ostensibly perpetuate prejudices. Institutes like Harvard and Oxford are busy mapping every aspect of India society, including Kumbh Mela. National Education Policy (NEP) and some of its problems, especially as pertaining to social sciences are discussed Video.

Discussion with Arti Tikoo Singh

In this video, Rajiv Malhotra and the Editor-in-Chief of The New Indian, Arti Tikoo

Singh, have an engaging discussion on a wide variety of issues on Indian civilization.

They discuss the concept of caste in India and how it differs from race, the false equivalences between Indian minorities and oppressed people elsewhere in the world, and the concept of Western universalism. Government departments and ministries have been unsuccessful in projecting the Indian civilization and establishing the Indian identity. They also discuss democracy with respect to India and its relevance in modern times. America's edge in technology and economics (dollar being the standard) have allowed it to continue its hegemony over the rest of the world. Video.

Discussion with Vivek Agnihotri

In this engaging conversation, note filmmaker Vivek Agnihotri and Rajiv Malhotra discuss various ideas discussed in the book Snakes in the Ganga. Rajiv explains the concept of Americanization of Marxism and its role vis-à-vis the ongoing social upheaval in the U.S. They also talk at length about the coalition of victim identities, particularly in the U.S. and in India, and the role that Harvard plays in bringing them together to spread its views.

Harvard controls the discourse, with leading Indian billionaires serving as some of its major funders and endorsers. Harvard uses the money to build its own image as the center of the Social Justice movement despite being unacademic in its whole approach. The billionaires' money would have been better spent in establishing liberal arts institutes in India. Video.

Is Niti Aayog infiltrated by Harvard?

Vijaya Viswanathan talks about the different ways in which Harvard has penetrated the Indian government to influence policy making. This thesis is corroborated by NITI Aayog's eagerness to hire Harvard professors and alumni to do studies on behalf of the government, for which it is also handing over key Indian databases. Such people are also allowed to sit on important functional bodies overseeing business development in the country.

The NITI Aayog seems to be unaware of some of the disastrous consequences of the New Education Policy and is in fact taking steps to see that these universities can teach any curriculum they like without interference or oversight from the government or any other entity. The government also allows people from American universities like Harvard and Harvard-influenced liberal arts universities in India like Ashoka to represent the country in key international forums. Interview with Rahul Shivshankar

Noted Indian news anchor Rahul Shivshankar interviews Rajiv Malhotra on different ideas discussed in the book Snakes in the Ganga. Rajiv explains how Harvard uses its powerful position and clout in India to export American social theories such as Critical Race Theory (CRT)/Wokeism, misapplying it to Indian casteism, ignoring the difference in historical context. These studies have degenerated into activism with an agenda of dismantling Hindutva, the civilization, the nation, etc.

Rajiv explains how in the name of free speech and liberalism, Harvard has become the most powerful institution creating and spreading this discourse, in which the oppressed Hindus don't get a seat at the table. On the one hand America wants policies that will continue to favor trade with India but at the same time they want India weak enough so that it doesn't become another China. Therefore, it actively promotes Khalistanis, Kashmiri separatists, Dalits, etc. Anybody speaking against India gets a forum and a very one-sided narrative is built up where the people being attacked don't get to respond, which is propagated in India through liberal arts universities, media houses and popular discourse.
