Largest Pan IIT organization meets Rajiv Malhotra on CRT | Battle for IIT's

In this chat with members of the world's largest Pan IIT organization, Rajiv Malhotra introduces the book Snakes in the Ganga as the latest tool to disrupt the social sciences. It is a strong rebuttal to the sophisticated Breaking India forces of today.

Chapter 4 deals with the attack on IITs by Harvard's Marxist scholar Ajantha Subramanian. Her thesis is that IITs are creating cultural capital for higher castes. This is being called meritocracy and it is shutting out Dalits and lower castes.

Other authors and activists have claimed that caste is racism and that Dalits are the Blacks of India. Equality Labs even took Cisco to court, and HR departments are now being coached to include caste in DEI.

The book has convinced some in government and national security to question Harvard's role in dealing with minority and gender issues in India. Indian billionaires' funding of Harvard's mischief may also see some change.

In the following interaction with IITians, they agreed to play an active role to break the momentum of this movement, whether through funding, influence, technical knowhow, or by any other means. Video.

West is Attacking Indian Merit & IIT's | Battle for IIT's

In this video, Rajiv Malhotra and Vijaya Viswanathan take questions from IITians. Malhotra explains that the attack against the IITs is an extension of the attack against meritocracy that Marxists have problematized years ago.

The multi-pronged attack is based on certain theories that have been developed in Western academia. From leading Western institutions, these ideas have reached the general public through schools, media and other institutions.

Microsoft, Facebook and Google employees approached Malhotra, after the Indian consulate failed to help them with the public shaming they were facing in the workplace.

India's response to these attacks has been weak because it hasn't been cohesive. Even among IITians there are die-hard Marxists, those that don't want to move out of their comfort zones, those wanting to go their own way and those avoiding the spotlight. The Indian government has also not done much.

The Chinese however advocate meritocracy and STEM education. The authoritarian regime allows for tight collaboration between businesses and the government.

The authors also talk about their collaboration efforts with people in India and elsewhere and Infinity Foundation's future plans. Video.

Largest event in USA to hear Rajiv Malhotra's main contributions

In Rajiv Malhotra's address at this august occasion, he mainly talks about Hindu frameworks and explains how the protection of the civilization boils down to the protection of the frameworks. The West has done a very good job of studying our civilization, and picking and digesting parts of it into its own frameworks.

But Hinduism doesn't lack frameworks. Our rishis have organized our knowledge systems (philosophy, astronomy, botany, etc) on a Vedic substratum, based on Vedic metaphysics. Western education has imbibed western frameworks in us, which is why our own people (including political leadership, gurus, etc) refer to the Western frameworks. So our Itihasa has become epics/mythology, our moortis have become idols, our devatas Hindu "Gods", atma has become soul, etc. He also mentions outer (mundane) and inner (mental/spiritual) frameworks.

It is the one that owns the operating system that controls the apps. Similarly, the frameworks constitute the operating system that is controlled by the West, or Chinese, or Islam. And all these systems are good at defending themselves/their society/actions based on their own frameworks. That is where we are lacking.

Malhotra's efforts are focused on developing a school of thought through institutionalization of the knowledge that he is producing so others can take the battle forward. Video.

What is the future of Humanity & Ethical AI with Foster Gamble

In this video, Malhotra says that his India tour was designed to bring awareness among Indians about certain global events that are already affecting them, although they may be thinking of them as stray incidents, and not part of a nexus of the global elite to foster identity politics with a view to taking down the existing structures of society.

The global elite are using Marxism and Postmodernism frameworks to dismantle society. But while Marx talked about economic oppression, the Woke movement has designated certain groups as oppressed so that a coalition between them can be formed.

Marxism has never solved any of the problems it has described and in the few countries that adopted it, there has only been destruction, murders, starvation, etc. The people involved in Wokeism too have no experience in building anything. Therefore, in the upheaval that will inevitably follow such social engineering, there will be a vacuum that will be filled by new power structures developed by the global elite.

The AI-based algorithms that determine norms of individual behavior and ESG that lays down the acceptable institutional behavior for corporates are essentially these new structures in the making. And it will lead to loss of individual freedom, or slavery. Video.
